JUDICIAL SPEECHES

Her Honour Judge Tracy Fantin, Judge of the District Court of Queensland, Planning and Environment Court of Queensland, and Childrens Court of Queensland, The Domestic and Family Violence Protection (Combating Coercive Control) and Other Legislation Amendment Bill 2022: what can we expect?, Judicial CPD series, Supreme and District Court of Queensland, Cairns, 23 February 2023

Her Honour recently addressed the Judicial CPD session in Cairns. The topic of Her Honour's speech is the recent legislative changes in criminal law, and domestic and family violence. In this speech, her Honour gives an overview of the main amendments which will be of particular relevance to those who practice in areas of domestic and family violence and criminal law. While her Honour's speech necessarily delves into some of the technical aspects of the new law her Honour has also considered the practical implications of the new law. As Her Honour notes in conclusion, the "Bill goes well beyond merely amending the law with respect to coercive control. It effects significant amendments to many aspects of criminal procedure, including the conduct of trials, sentences, and pre-trial applications."

PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE – APPLICATION TO STRIKE OUT THE STATEMENT OF CLAIM – WHERE THE PLAINTIFF PLEADED MATTERS WHICH WERE NOT MATERIAL FACTS – WHERE THE PLAINTIFF DEFENDED THESE PLEADINGS AS BEING REQUIRED NOT TO TAKE THE DEFENDANT BY SURPRISE – EXPLANATION AND SCOPE OF THE “NO SURPRISE” EXCEPTION IN R 149(1)(C) UCPR

Earthtec Pty Ltd v Livingstone Shire Council* [2023] QSC 22 ☆

In this notable judgment, Freeburn J provided a helpful summary of the application of the “no surprise” exception to the requirement that only material facts must be pleaded. His Honour ultimately concluded that its application in modern commercial litigation should be limited.

Freeburn J

17 February 2023

The plaintiff commenced proceedings against the defendant Council relating to the construction of part of the Scenic Highway adjacent to Statue Bay, near Yeppoon. [1]. The Council applied to strike out the plaintiff's statement of claim, which runs to some 128 pages. [1], [3].

Notably, the plaintiff pleaded that an entity which was commissioned to prepare the preliminary and detailed design works subject to the contracts was engaged in trade or commerce under the Australian

Consumer Law. [42]. However, that entity was not joined as a party to the proceeding and no allegation was made that its actions breached its obligations under the Australian Consumer Law. [43]. The plaintiff accepted that these paragraphs did not plead material facts, but nonetheless defended its pleading on the ground that the allegations raised, if not pleaded, might cause surprise to the Council. [44].

Under r 149(b) UCPR, a party is required to plead all the material facts on which it relies but not the evidence by which they are to be proved. [33]. Rule 149(c) UCPR further provides that the pleading must “state specifically any matter that if not stated specifically may take another party by surprise”. [33].

In considering whether to strike out parts of the statement of claim, Freeburn J observed that r 149(1)(c) UCPR may sometimes permit a party to go beyond the material facts that are strictly necessary for their claim or defence, and so may operate as an exception to the requirements of r 149(1)(b) UCPR. [45]. Importantly, however, his Honour observed that the “no surprise” exception does not require a party to guarantee that its opponent will encounter nothing unexpected at trial. [47]. Rather, it requires that a party plead all matters required to prevent its opponent from being faced with “an unexpected turn in the case” which the opponent is unable to meet because it could not be prepared to meet it, having regard to the content of the pleading. [47].

Significantly, Freeburn J noted that the “no surprise” exception does not give a party open licence to plead immaterial facts or evidence. [48]. His Honour considered that where there is no reasonable prospect of surprise, only the material facts should be pleaded. [49]. Thus, the intention of r 149(1)(c) UCPR “is merely to provide for exceptional cases where there is a genuine apprehension of surprise”. [48]. As a matter of modern practice, his Honour considered that in modern civil litigation, the element of surprise tends to be diminished by the practice of affidavits, witness statements or written summaries of evidence being provided. [49]. Ultimately, his Honour concluded that the “no surprise” exception “is not a blanket justification for pleadings that go beyond the material facts that are strictly necessary for the claim” or defence. [50].

COSTS – COSTS “THROWN AWAY” BY AMENDMENTS TO STATEMENT OF CLAIM – WHETHER APPROPRIATE TO MAKE ORDER AWARDING COSTS THROWN AWAY BECAUSE OF AMENDMENT OF PLEADINGS IN LIGHT OF OPERATION OF UCPR RRZ≈ 386 OR 692(2)

JM Kelly Buildings Pty Ltd v Murphy [\[2023\] QSC 23](#) ☆

The judgment related to the second defendant seeking an order that the plaintiffs pay her costs of the proceeding for the period of 23 August 2019 and 24 August 2020 on an indemnity basis. Justice Freeburn held that, despite the operation of rr 386 and 692(2) UCPR, it was appropriate to make a specific order dealing with the costs thrown away by the plaintiffs’ amendments because of the complexity of the case, the certainty the order would provide to the parties and the assistance such an order would provide for the second defendant as a self-represented litigant.

Freeburn J

17 February 2023

The second defendant in the proceeding sought orders that the plaintiff pay all her costs in the proceeding for the period between 23 August 2019 and 24 August 2020 on an indemnity basis. [1]. During that period of time, the plaintiffs made an application that the second defendant was in contempt of court because she was in breach of freezing orders, but the application was ultimately dismissed by consent. [5], [7], [9]. Further, the existing plaintiffs joined additional plaintiffs to the action, amended the claim and substantively amended the statement of claim. [10] – [11]. None of the plaintiffs’ amendments were in response to the defendants’ conduct and no explanation was offered as to why the amendments could not have been present in the first version of the pleading. [33].

At the end of 2020, the second defendant could no longer afford to retain solicitors, and thereafter represented herself. [15].

There were several orders made during the relevant period with costs reserved under each order, except one. Justice Freeburn held it was appropriate to make a specific order dealing with the costs thrown away by the amendments for three reasons. First, as in the case of Callide Power Managements Pty Ltd v Callide Coalfields (Sales) Pty Ltd (No 4) [2015] QSC 337, there was complexity to the case. Second, the parties would benefit from the explicit interim allocations of costs. Third, as a self-represented litigant, it may be of some assistance to the second defendant when dealing with lawyers or with costs assessors to be able to point to a specific order which allocated to her the costs thrown away by the amendments. [35].

CORPORATIONS – STATUTORY DEMAND – APPLICATION TO SET ASIDE – WHERE THERE WAS A GENUINE DISPUTE AS TO INDEBTEDNESS – WHETHER THE STATUTORY DEMAND WAS BEING USED FOR AN IMPROPER PURPOSE

Big Pineapple Corp Pty Ltd v Rankin Investments (Qld) Pty Ltd* [2023] QSC 26 ☆

This case involved an application to set aside a statutory demand, which sought repayment of alleged loans made to the corporate trustee of a joint venture. Justice Ryan found that, upon a review of the evidence, there was a genuine dispute as to whether the debt was payable. Further, her Honour concluded that there was an abuse of process, in that the demand was used to exert commercial pressure to achieve a purpose other than repayment.

Ryan J

20 February 2023

Background

The Big Pineapple Unit Trust is a joint venture vehicle for the development of land on which a tourism icon, The Big Pineapple, is located. [1]. The applicant is its corporate trustee. [1]. Units in the trust, and shares in the applicant, are held by the joint venturers – the Kendall parties and the Rankin parties. [2]. Both have contributed funds to the joint venture over time. [3]. Notably, that has included contributions by Mr Rankin's self-managed super funds. [3].

Because of certain conduct of Mr Rankin in 2019, there was an "Event of Default" that entitles the Kendall parties to buy out the Rankin parties' interest in the joint venture at fair market value. [4]. The process of valuing the interest for that purpose is currently being undertaken by an accountant. [4].

It is in this context that Mr Rankin's self-managed super fund served a statutory demand on the applicant, seeking repayment of amounts it had contributed to the joint venture, which it asserts were by way of a loan due and payable on 30 June 2022. [5].

The applicant applied to have the statutory demand set aside under s 459G of the Corporations Act 2001 (Cth). It alleged that there was a genuine dispute about whether the debt was payable on 30 June 2022, and that there is an abuse of process. [6].

Why the statutory demand was set aside

Justice Ryan agreed that the statutory demand should be set aside on both of the grounds alleged by the applicant. First, her Honour found, after reviewing a substantial amount of evidence, that there was a "genuine dispute about whether the debt the subject of the statutory demand was due and payable on 30 June 2022". [7]. The genuine dispute arose for a number of reasons, including because the supposed loan agreements were made without the consent of the applicant's board, and there were questions about whether the money was intended to be repayable, and whether the loan agreements were genuine. [162]–[163], [171].

Although the finding on the first issue was sufficient to dispose of the case, her Honour also concluded that the statutory demand process was being “utilised by Mr Rankin for a purpose other than its intended purpose”. [180]. The context – in particular, that the Kendall parties were in the process of buying out the Rankin parties’ interest (described above) – supported an inference that Mr Rankin had issued the statutory demand to “exert commercial pressure upon [the applicant] to achieve his desired outcome, which was to avoid the [Rankin parties] withdrawal from the joint venture”. [185].

Accordingly, her Honour ordered that the statutory demand be set aside.

JUDICIAL REVIEW – IMPROPER PURPOSES – WHERE THE APPLICANT APPLIED FOR PAROLE – WHERE THE RESPONDENT REFUSED THE APPLICATION FOR PAROLE – WHERE THE APPLICANT SOUGHT A STATUTORY ORDER OF REVIEW IN RESPECT OF THE REFUSAL ON THE GROUNDS THAT THE DECISION WAS BASED ON A RULE OR POLICY WITHOUT REGARD TO THE MERITS OF THE CASE

Naehu v Parole Board Queensland [2023] QSC 16 ☆

The applicant, who is currently serving 10 years and six months in custody for violent and drug offending, applied for and was refused parole. After receiving the Parole Board’s reasons for this decision, the applicant applied to the Supreme Court for a statutory review of that decision. The applicant argued, amongst other grounds, that the Parole Board had refused parole on the basis of a rule or policy regarding treatment programs rather than determining the matter based on the merits. The applicant had engaged in some programs while on remand, but had not completed a program in relation to violent offending nor an intensive drug abuse intervention program. Indeed, the applicant was ineligible for the violent offending rehabilitation program as he maintained his innocence for the indexed offending. Kelly J held that the Parole Board’s decision was lawful. The Board had not only considered the non-participation in certain programs, but had careful consideration of the applicant’s circumstances, including his criminal history, factors leading the offending, nature of the index offending, and conduct while on remand. The statutory review application was consequently dismissed.

Kelly J

21 February 2023

Background

The applicant applied for and was refused parole. [1]. He is currently serving 10 years and six months in prison for violent and drug offending, including rape (a domestic violence offence) and torture. [1], [4]–[12]. Following the refusal of parole, the applicant requested a statement of reasons, which was provided by the Parole Board. [1].

In its reasons, the Board considered the applicant posed an unacceptable risk to the community if released. [23]. In particular, the applicant had shown a lack of insight into the offending, down-playing his role and “victim blaming”. [19]–[22]. The applicant also remained an “untreated sexual offender” as he had exited early from the “Medium Intensity Sexual Offending Program” (“MISOP”). [22]. Although he had completed a number of programs while on remand, including “Getting Started, Short Substance Intervention” and “Low Intensity Substance Intervention”, the Board considered a higher intensity substance intervention program was needed due to the “critical role” of substance abuse in his offending. [14], [22].

The Board ultimately was of the view that parole conditions could not mitigate the level of risk and refused the application. [26]–[27]. The Board advised the applicant that a further application could be lodged in six months after their decision date or “upon commencement of the MISOP or an equivalent intervention program.” [27].

After receiving the Board’s reasons, the applicant filed an application for statutory order of review in relation to the Board’s decision. [2]. The focus of this case note is the ground that “the Board made its decision in accordance with a rule or policy without regard to the merits of this particular case”. [40]. That is, the applicant argued, that the Board’s insistence that he complete programs not available to him (due to not admitting guilt for the offences) prevented him from ever being granted parole. [49]–[50].

Decision of the Supreme Court

Kelly J rejected all grounds raised in the application for review and dismissed the application. [64].

His Honour noted that an application for statutory review is not a merits review, but rather a consideration of whether the decision was one the decision-maker was authorised to make under law. [31]. The central issue in the present case was what procedural fairness required of the Board when making its decision. [35].

Kelly J considered Batts v Department of Corrective Services; Fogarty v Department of Corrective Services [2002] QSC 206, which was relied upon by the applicant. In that case Batts, who was incarcerated for sexual offences, had never admitted guilt for the offence nor had he undertaken a sexual offenders’ treatment program offered at his correctional facility. [52]. Dutney J held that a refusal to grant parole merely on the basis that there had been no admission of guilt or failure to undertake a course was “an entirely improper exercise of the relevant power”. [53]. That principle arose from Wiskar [1998] QSC 279, in which the decision-maker had only considered non-engagement in programs, but had not otherwise assessed the risk. In contrast, Dutney J found that this was not the case here as the decision-maker’s reasons encompassed other considerations, including a history of denial of other offences. [54].

Similarly, Kelly J found that in the present case, the Board had not denied the application solely because the applicant had denied guilt or refused to participate in certain programs. [57]. The Board engaged in careful consideration of the applicant’s circumstances, including his criminal history, factors leading the offending, nature of the index offending, and conduct while on remand. [57]. The Board, as it was entitled to, placed significant weight on the applicant’s lack of insight and that he had treatment needs in respect of violence and addiction which remained unmet, as he had not engaged in relevant programs. [57].

As no basis was established for this ground, the argument was rejected and the application ultimately dismissed. [58], [64].

PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE – COSTS – WHERE PLAINTIFF WAS SUCCESSFUL AT TRIAL AND WHERE THE DEFENDANTS WERE FOUND JOINTLY LIABLE – WHETHER SECOND DEFENDANT SHOULD PAY THE COSTS THE PLAINTIFF INCURRED AGAINST THE FIRST DEFENDANT AND THE COSTS OF THE CONTRIBUTION CLAIMS

Reddock v ST&T Pty Ltd (No 2)* [2023] QSC 21 ☆

In these interesting applications, his Honour considered the question of costs following a successful trial for damages for personal injuries brought by the plaintiff, a concrete delivery driver, against her employer and another party, a concrete batching plant which hired her as a driver. At trial she recovered against each and his Honour declared that liability in respect of the plaintiff’s damages be 50 per cent against the first defendant and 50 per cent against the second defendant. Amongst other matters, his Honour considered whether the plaintiff’s costs against the second defendant should include the costs the plaintiff incurred as against the employer, and whether the second defendant ought to pay the employer's costs of the contribution proceedings between the defendants.

Jackson J

23 February 2023

At trial, judgment was awarded in the plaintiff's favour against the first defendant (the employer) in the sum of $633,253.53 clear of a WorkCover refund of $30,699.42 and against the second defendant in the sum of $727,133.81. [1].

The plaintiff and the first defendant each sought costs against the second defendant. Notwithstanding the plaintiff's success in her claim for damages against the first defendant, no costs order could be made as between them, and each party was to bear their own costs, by reason of s 316 Workers Compensation and Rehabilitation Act 2003 ("the Act") because final written offers were made at the compulsory conference, neither of which was engaged. As matters eventuated the amount of the judgment was less than the plaintiff's written final offer on the claim against the first defendant at the compulsory conference but exceeded the first defendant's written final offer. [3].

As such, the plaintiff applied for orders that:

1. the second defendant should be ordered to pay the plaintiff's costs of the claim against the first defendant as well as the plaintiff's costs of the claim against the second defendant;
2. all the plaintiff's costs should be ordered to be assessed on the indemnity basis. [4].

The first defendant sought an order that the second defendant pay the first defendant's costs incurred after 22 September 2022 (being what his Honour considered a reasonable time after the joint Calderbank offer dated 8 September 2022) of defending the plaintiff's claim and the first defendant's costs incurred after 22 September 2022 of the contribution claims between the defendants. [5].

The second defendant sought to resist the plaintiff's application on the basis that the order sought would be prohibited by s 316(3) of the Act. [14].

Whether the plaintiff's costs against the second defendant should include the costs the plaintiff incurred as against the employer

In circumstances where it contended it had been "forced" to bring a claim against both defendants since both denied liability the plaintiff argued that it was appropriate that the second defendant assume the liability for the plaintiff's costs against the first defendant. [8]. His Honour did not share the view that that proposal would be contrary to s 316 of the Act, noting that in Thomson v State of Queensland [2019] 3 Qd R 514 and Paskins v Hail Creek Pty Ltd (No 2) [2018] 2 Qd R 518 it was held that there is no inconsistency between s 316 of the Act and an order that a plaintiff's costs against their employer be contained within the costs the other unsuccessful defendant is ordered to pay, when the plaintiff succeeded against the employer in an amount that was less than its written final offer yet greater than the insurer's written final offer at the compulsory conference. [15].

Ultimately in the exercise of his discretion his Honour's view was that the joint Calderbank offer by the plaintiff and first defendant warranted an order that the plaintiff's costs against the first defendant should be met by the second defendant, from a reasonable period for acceptance after the date of said offer. [18]. He pithily observed:

"Acceptance of that offer of compromise would have brought the whole proceeding to an end and on terms that were much more favourable to the second defendant than the judgments on the claim and contribution claims proved to be... in my view it was unreasonable for the second defendant not to accept the joint Calderbank offer in this case". [19].

In his Honour's assessment it did not necessarily follow that the costs should be assessed on the indemnity basis, particularly having regard to the fact that such an order would result in the plaintiff recovering more in respect of those costs against the second defendant than if she had been entitled to an award of costs against the first defendant under s 316(2)(a) of the Act. [20]–[21].

Whether the second defendant ought to pay the employer's costs of the contribution proceedings between the defendants

The first defendant sought an order that the second defendant pay its costs of the contribution claims. His Honour was principally persuaded by the point that under the joint Calderbank offer, the amount of contribution was more favourable to the second defendant (principally in that the first defendant offered to pay 50 per cent of the joint offer of $450,000 (namely $225,000) which the plaintiff was prepared to compromise the action when the ultimate amount of the second defendant's liability to pay contribution was $363,566. His Honour considered it was unreasonable not to accept that offer having regard to the evidence and the issues decided at the trial and ordered that the second defendant pay the first defendant's costs of the contribution claims incurred after 22 September 2020. [34]–[36].

Disposition

The order of the Court was that:

1. The second defendant pay the plaintiff's costs of the claim against the second defendant to be assessed on the indemnity basis.
2. The second defendant pay the plaintiff's costs of the claim against the first defendant incurred after 22 September 2020.
3. The second defendant pay the first defendant's costs of the contribution claims incurred after 22 September 2020.

REAL PROPERTY – TORRENS TITLE – EXCEPTIONS TO INDEFEASIBILITY – FRAUD OR FORGERY – WHERE THE PLAINTIFF'S LAND WAS FRAUDULENTLY MORTGAGED AND THEN SOLD BY THE MORTGAGEE – WHERE THERE WAS A FAILURE TO TAKE REASONABLE STEPS TO VERIFY IDENTITY – WHETHER THE INTERESTS OF THIRD-PARTY PURCHASERS SHOULD TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER THE PLAINTIFF – WHETHER COMPENSATION IS AVAILABLE AGAINST THE STATE

Issa v Owens* [2023] QSC 4 ☆

This case involved a claim by the landowner that she had been the victim of fraud on the basis that her son had forged her signature and mortgaged her property without her knowledge, consent or approval. Crowley J found that the original mortgagees did not obtain indefeasibility of title despite registration of the mortgage because the original mortgagees had failed to take reasonable steps to verify the mortgagor's identity. His Honour also found that the equitable interests of a purchaser did not supplant the defrauded person's legal entitlement as registered owner. Further, his Honour made orders as to the payment of compensation by the State, pursuant to provisions in the Land Title Act 1994.

Crowley J

24 February 2023

Background

The plaintiff, Ms Issa, is 83 years old. [1]–[2]. In 2017 she purportedly executed a mortgage over her property, securing a loan advanced to a company controlled by her son, Mr Karbotli. [5]. She claimed she is the victim of fraud, and that her son forged her signatures without her knowledge. [7].

In 2018 the property was sold by the mortgagees, purportedly pursuant to a power of sale under the mortgage. [18]. Settlement took place, but a transfer to the purchasers (Mr and Mrs Morecroft) has not yet been registered because the Registrar of Titles lodged a caveat after receiving an email from the plaintiff about the alleged fraud. [18].

In this proceeding, Ms Issa sought declarations and orders pursuant to s 187 Land Title Act 1994 to undo the effects of the purported transactions. [22]. On the other hand, the purchasers contended that they have an equitable interest which should prevail over the Ms Issa's. [22]. Alternatively, they sought damages against the mortgagees. [23]. Both Ms Issa and the purchasers also sought compensation under the Land Title Act 1994 against the State of Queensland. [24].

Why the mortgage transactions were void

Justice Crowley found that there was “clear and compelling evidence” of fraud – namely, that Ms Issa's signature had been forged by her son. [67]. This conclusion was supported by a range of evidence, including the opinion of a forensic document examiner. [75]. Further, a former solicitor (Mr Picken) who had signed documents attesting to witnessing Ms Issa execute the document, confirmed that, in fact, “Ms Issa was not in his presence, and he did not witness her sign any documents”. [80].

His Honour found that both the original mortgagee, and a subsequent mortgagee after transfer, despite having the mortgage and transfer registered, did not obtain the benefit of indefeasibility. [121]–[122]. That was because they had failed to comply with the requirements of ss 11A(2) and 11B(2) of the Land Title Act 1994, in that they failed to “take reasonable steps” to verify Ms Issa's identity as mortgagor. [120]. They had relied upon Mr Picken's supposed attestation to witnessing, but this was not sufficient in the circumstances, including because Ms Issa's driver's licence was expired, and it was clear he had failed to comply with the identity verification procedure set out in the document he completed (including because a copy of a photograph was taken at an earlier time, and did not include the date, time and place at which it was taken). [120].

Accordingly, the mortgage was a fraud, and consequently “null and void and of no effect”. [126].

Why the purchaser's supposed equitable interest did not prevail

The purchasers of the property, Mr and Mrs Morecroft, argued that upon entry into the contract of sale for the property, they acquired an equitable interest in the property. [195]. They alleged that their equitable interest should triumph over the allegedly equitable interest of Ms Issa, including because of supposedly disentitling conduct on her part. [196]–[198]. They relied on the fact that Ms Issa accepted $40,000 in return for the release of a caveat she had initially lodged, which allowed the sale to them to proceed. [200].

Justice Crowley rejected the claims of the purchasers. Most importantly, this was because Mr Issa's claim was not equitable – it was a claim “to be determined according to the statutory rules concerning the indefeasibility of interests, and exceptions to indefeasibility of interests, under the [Land Title Act 1994]”. [205]. Given the conclusions reached above about the fraud, the contest between Ms Issa and the purchasers was between her “indefeasible legal title and whatever equitable right or interest [they] might have”. [206]. There was no relevant exception to indefeasibility in this circumstance. [207]. In any event, his Honour considered that, even if he were wrong and the dispute was between competing equities, he would find that Ms Issa had the better claim. [276], [278]–[281].

The purchaser's case against the original mortgagees

Justice Crowley found that the purchasers were entitled to damages for breach of contract against the original mortgagees, who had warranted that they would be capable of completing the contract. [311]. His Honour considered that the purchase price paid four years ago would not be a just measure of the loss they had suffered, noting that its value had increased. His Honour made an award that included the present value of the property, costs expended on improvement, stamp duty and registration. [320].

Compensation under the Land Title Act 1994

Both Ms Issa and the purchasers also sought compensation from the State pursuant to provisions in the Land Title Act 1994. [322].

Ms Issa sought recoupment of her legal fees, which Crowley J accepted could constitute compensable “loss or damage” under the relevant provisions. [336]. Notably, however, Ms Issa only pleaded reliance on s 188A, which allows compensation from the State where there is “incorrect registration”. [338]. However, his Honour said this did not cover the circumstances of this case, which involved the “fraud of another person”, which was addressed by s 188(1)(a). [338]. Ms Issa had not pleaded the latter provision, and his Honour considered that she should be held to her case as pleaded. [329]. Accordingly, her claim for compensation from the State was dismissed. [348].

His Honour considered that the purchasers, however, were entitled to compensation under s 188(1)(a) Land Title Act 1994, because of the “fraud of another person” (Ms Issa’s son). [367]. His Honour considered that the provision did extend to provide compensation for equitable interests, such as the purchasers had. [357]. Given that the purchasers had also been awarded damages against the mortgagees and should not be entitled to double-dip, his Honour considered it appropriate to hear further from the parties about the appropriate form of orders, noting the power of the Court under s 188B(2) to make such orders as “it considers just”. [373]–[374].

QUEENSLAND REPORTS

The Queensland Reports seek to provide a permanent collection of the key decisions of the Supreme Court of Queensland since Federation. These decisions have been selected for inclusion in the Queensland Reports by the Editor, summarised by the Reporters in concise headnotes, reviewed by the Editor and the Production Manager for their textual accuracy and authorised for publication (with corrections where necessary) by the deciding judges.

Annual subscriptions to the printed bound volumes of the Queensland Reports (currently issued in printed format of three annual bound volumes) are also available from the ICLRQ. The current subscription rate is $198 (including GST and delivery). Orders and enquiries may be forwarded to the ICLRQ via email.

QUEENSLAND LAW REPORTER

The Queensland Law Reporter (QLR) has been published since 1908 as a weekly supplement to the Queensland Reports. It is published every Friday, in electronic format, save for a period during the court vacation (from late December to early January).

The QLR includes a summary by the Editors of the week's most significant developments in Queensland law, including brief summaries of recent cases which have been identified as potentially suitable for reporting in the Queensland Reports and information about the progress of appeals in reportable cases.

The QLR is a publication approved under r 599(4) Uniform Civil Procedure Rules 1999 ("UCPR") for the purposes of giving notice of intention to apply for a grant of probate or letters of administration under Ch 15 Pt 2 UCPR. The QLR is also approved under r 12A Supreme Court (Admission) Rules 2004, for the purposes of giving notice of intention to apply for admission as a legal practitioner.

QUEENSLAND JUDGMENTS WEBSITE

The Queensland Judgments website, available at www.queenslandjudgments.com.au, was first launched in March 2018. On 4 September 2020, a new version of the Queensland Judgments website was launched, which expanded its coverage to all Queensland Courts and Tribunals. This content will be continuously updated upon the delivery of each judgment or decision authorised for publication from all Queensland Courts and Tribunals.

On 1 March 2021, an additional 35,000 historical unreported judgments were added, including the complete collection of unreported judgments of the Court of Appeal as well as further instalments of the backset of unreported judgments of: the Supreme Court (now complete from 1979); the District Court (now complete from 2000); the Land Court and Land Appeal Court (now complete from 1985); the Planning & Environment Court (now complete from 2000); the Industrial Court (now complete from 2008); and the entire digital collections of the Childrens Court; the Magistrates Court; the Queensland Civil and Administrative Tribunal; the Legal Practice Tribunal; the Queensland Health Practitioners Tribunal; and the Retail Shop Leases Tribunal.
