2023 JAMES MERRALLS FELLOWSHIP IN LAW LECTURE

Date: Thursday, 9 March 2023

Time: 5.30 pm to 6.30 pm (AEDT)

Venue: The Gibbs Room, Bar Association of Queensland, 107 North Quay, Brisbane City, Qld 4000

Presenter: The Hon Justice Stephen Kós, New Zealand Supreme Court

Parallel Universes: the Curious Dearth of Trans-Tasman Citation

Despite Australia's proximity to New Zealand, and the two countries' shared common law backgrounds, they seldom cite each other's case law. Justice Stephen Kós, of the New Zealand Supreme Court, has examined trends in citation over the last 70 years on both sides of the Tasman. A modest high point of mutual legal interest emerged in the 1980s/90s. Thereafter mutual indifference largely resumed. The main focus of the lecture is on legal history. It looks in particular at areas where Australian case law has proved influential in New Zealand, and the contextual reasons explaining the curious dearth of trans-Tasman citation.

SELDEN SOCIETY 2023 LECTURE SERIES — LECTURE ONE: MR JUSTICE HARDING — A TITAN OF QUEENSLAND LAW

Date: Thursday, 23 March 2023

Time: 5.15 pm for 5.30 pm (refreshments in the Portrait Gallery after the lecture)

Place: The Banco Court, Queen Elizabeth II Courts of Law, Level 3, 415 George Street, Brisbane and Online

Presented by: John McKenna KC

George Rogers Harding (1838–1895) was the fifth Judge of the Supreme Court of Queensland. He is most widely known for three aspects of his life. First, he is regarded as one of Queensland's finest civil lawyers, whose rigorous analytical approach helped to establish the reputation of the Supreme Court. Secondly, he is remembered for his remarkable fortitude. Overcoming great pain, he insisted upon completing a long civil jury trial, before eventually dying in his chambers. This noble end, to a life of public service, provided the inspiration for the first judicial portrait to be commissioned and installed in the Supreme Court. Thirdly, he is known as one of Queensland's most influential bibliophiles. As well as writing some of Queensland's first legal texts, Harding was instrumental in developing a fine collection for the Supreme Court Library. After his death, his extensive personal library provided the foundation for what became the State Library of Queensland.

This Selden Society lecture will examine Harding's personal and professional life and legacy—together with the developing legal community in which he lived and worked in the late 19th century.

AUSTRALIAN ACADEMY OF LAW EVENTS

The Treaty Negotiation Framework for Victoria

Date: 1 March 2023

Time: 5.00 pm – 6.30 pm AEDT

Place: Online and at Court No 1 Federal Court, 305 William Street, Melbourne

Speakers: The Hon Kenneth Hayne AC KC, Karri Walker, Rueben Berg

The First Peoples' Assembly of Victoria is recognised under the Advancing the Treaty Process with Aboriginal Victorians Act 2018 (Vic) as the Aboriginal Representative Body that works with the State of Victoria to establish by agreement the elements necessary to support future Treaty negotiations. On 20 October 2022, by an agreement, the First Peoples' Assembly and the State of Victoria established the Treaty Negotiation Framework. The Framework provides for a process for negotiating and formalising a treaty to recognise historic wrongs and address ongoing injustices. It identifies the minimum standards with which a party must comply in order to enter into treaty negotiations. It imposes reporting requirements and provides for a process for resolving disputes together with mechanisms for enforcement. The Australian Academy of Law is delighted to host this event, chaired by the Hon Pamela Tate AM KC.

- How many times is the parliament involved in the process?
- Under the proposal, what are the words which would be added to the Constitution?
- Does the parliament presently have power to enact those words without adding the proposed words to the constitution?
- Does the amendment, if passed, ensure consultation?
- Does the amendment, if passed, ensure consultation on matters that directly affect Indigenous Australians?
- Under the amendment, if passed, would the Parliament or the executive government be under a legal obligation to consult the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander voice?
- Under the amendment, if passed, would the Parliament or the executive government be under a legal obligation to act on/give effect to a representation to it made by the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander voice?
- Does “matters relating to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples” mean matters which particularly specially affect such peoples?
- What would be the role of the courts? For example, would the courts have a role in deciding whether a matter was one relating to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples?
- Do the words “Aboriginal and also Torres Strait Islander peoples” have a specific meaning or would it be for the courts to decide?

PRACTICE DIRECTIONS

The Supreme Court has updated its Commercial List Note about Electronic Filing and Management.

Documents in Supreme Court Commercial List matters are to be filed both electronically using the Objective Connect platform and in hard copy in the Registry, unless relieved from the obligation to do so by a Court Order. Use of Objective Connect platform will make the case management process much more efficient for the Court, facilitate trials being conducted as eTrials, and thereby save parties time and costs.

The introduction of Objective Connect responded to representations from the profession that the 2016 Commercial List Practice Direction requirement for a USB to be filed in the Registry (in addition to hard copy documents) was inconvenient.

CRIMINAL LAW – WHERE THE APPELLANT WAS CONVICTED BY A JURY OF ONE COUNT OF MURDER – WHERE THE CHARGE AROSE FROM AN INCIDENT IN WHICH THE VICTIM APPROACHED THE APPELLANT’S HOUSE, AND THE APPELLANT, UPON EXITING THE HOUSE, SHOT THE VICTIM WITH A BOW AND ARROW – WHERE AT THE TIME OF THE KILLING THE VICTIM WAS STANDING ON A CONCRETE SLAB SITUATED BETWEEN THE APPELLANT’S HOUSE AND ANOTHER STRUCTURE ON THE PROPERTY – WHETHER THE CONCRETE SLAB WAS PART OF A “DWELLING” – S 267 CRIMINAL CODE

R v Richards [\[2023\] QCA 7](#) ★

The appellant was convicted of murder, having fatally shot an arrow at a man on his property. The appellant argued on appeal that the trial judge had erred by directing the jury that the defence of a dwelling, under s 267 of the Criminal Code 1899, was not available. The trial judge had ruled the concrete slab area, where the man was shot, did not constitute a “dwelling” for the purposes of s 267. The Court of Appeal held the trial judge had not erred. The concrete slab, between the appellant’s house/carport and shed, could not constitute a structure that could be entered or remained in, nor did it form part of the structure of the house/carport or shed (which were both considered dwellings). The Court of Appeal therefore dismissed this ground of appeal.

McMurdo and Flanagan JJA and Freeburn J

7 February 2023

Background

The appellant was convicted, after trial, of murder after he shot a man with a bow and arrow. [1]–[2]. The man had attended the appellant’s house and demanded he come outside. [1]. The appellant did so with the bow and arrow aimed at the man, telling him to stay back. [1]. The man “jolted” towards the appellant and the appellant fatally shot him. [1].

The appellant contends, on the evidence of a witness to the murder, that the victim was standing on the concrete slab between the appellant’s carport (attached to the side of the house) and shed when he was struck by the arrow. [7].

At trial, the judge ruled the concrete slab was not part of dwelling for the purposes of s 267 Criminal Code but the shed, “by virtue of the degree of connection as between the house and the shed” was ruled part of the dwelling. [8].

The appellant raised two grounds of appeal (only the first is the subject of this note). The appellant argued the trial judge wrongly decided a question of law or, alternatively, a miscarriage of justice was occasioned by his direction on s 267. [3]–[4].

Decision of the Court of Appeal

The Court of Appeal rejected ground one of the appeal. The Court held the concrete slab was not a dwelling for the purposes of s 267.

Section 267 provides that it is lawful for a person in “peaceable possession of a dwelling” to use force to repel another from unlawfully entering or remaining in the dwelling, if the person using the force believes on reasonable grounds that the other is intending to commit an indictable offence in the dwelling and it is necessary to use that force.

“Dwelling” is defined in the Criminal Code 1899 as including:

“any building or structure, or part of a building or structure, which is for the time being kept by the owner or occupier for the residence therein of himself or herself, his or her family, or servants, or any of them, and it is immaterial that it is from time to time uninhabited.

A building or structure adjacent to, and occupied with a dwelling is deemed to be part of the dwelling if there is a communication between such building or structure and the dwelling, either immediate or by means of a covered and enclosed passage leading from one to the other, but not otherwise.”

The Court of Appeal explained a dwelling “as defined must be a building or structure and it must be accepted that a structure in this context need not be a building”. [18]. That definition, however, “must be applied according to the context or subject matter of s 267”. [18]. That section refers to a person unlawfully entering or remaining in the dwelling. [19]. Therefore, a structure which is not a building would have to be such that, for s 267 purposes, a person could enter or remain in it. [19]. Here, the open concrete slab could not constitute such a structure. [19].

Similarly, the appellant’s contention that the concrete slab was part of the structure of the dwelling shed was rejected. [20]. The Court considered the slab no more part of the shed than the parallel concrete tracks that led to the slab. [20].

Additionally, although there may be some “communication” between the shed and house/carport, the slab still failed to satisfy the second paragraph of the definition of “dwelling”. [21].

The trial judge was therefore correct in his direction as to the inapplicability of s 267, as the concrete slab between the house/carport and shed did not constitute a “dwelling”.

ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS – RACING CLUBS AND ASSOCIATIONS – DISQUALIFICATIONS – OF HORSE – WHETHER THE DISQUALIFICATION OF A HORSE BY THE RACING INTEGRITY COMMISSION WAS VOID AND OF NO EFFECT – WHETHER THERE WAS AN IMPLIED TERM THAT THE OWNERS WERE TO BE AFFORDED NATURAL JUSTICE

Endresz v Queensland Racing Integrity Commission [2022] QSC 262 ☆

The applicants, a registered syndicate of owners of a racehorse, successfully argued that they had been denied natural justice when they were not provided with a notice of hearing or an opportunity to be heard prior to a decision being made which resulted in the horse's disqualification. His Honour found that not only was the hearing procedurally flawed but also the disqualification which resulted from the findings made by the stewards was void and of no effect.

Burns J

23 December 2022

The racehorse had placed first at a thoroughbred race meeting conducted by the respondents. The prize money was almost $1 million however it was not paid following revelations that the horse had been brought onto the racecourse with a prohibited substance known as “altrenogest” in its system. [1], [2], [19], [22]. The first applicant (the syndicate manager) was first alerted to the horse's disqualification after the stewards' report was published on the Commission's website. None of the syndicate members were afforded notice of the hearing nor any chance to be heard. Nor were they notified that a prohibited substance had been detected in the sample taken from their horse or given a copy of the results of its subsequent analysis. [24].

Was there a denial of natural justice?

The respondents submitted that the applicants' avenue of appeal under the Australian Rules of Racing sufficed to protect their interests and address any “disquiet” on their behalf. [28]. His Honour did not agree. He noted that the appeal right conferred by the rules was restricted in nature and would be unavailable to the applicants on the proper construction of the relevant rules. [29]. In addition, it was not the case that they would be able to apply to the Queensland Civil and Administrative Tribunal for a review of the internal review decision in circumstances where they lacked standing to seek a review under the Racing Integrity Act 2002. [31]. It followed that the applicants were left in the undesirable position of having no recourse to question the relevant findings made against them.

In that regard, his Honour relevantly noted that those factors alone presented a strong case for the implication of terms to the effect that the owners were to be heard and accorded natural justice at the inquiry before any finding was made. The court has previously recognised that the principles of natural justice would apply to such a hearing: see Hogno & Lee v Racing Queensland Ltd [2012] QSC 303, [53].

Was the disqualification decision void?

The respondents argued that the applicants had failed to demonstrate how they would have benefited from an opportunity to be heard at the inquiry, and pointed out that in any event, they were “represented in the consideration of the matter by the trainer”. [33]–[34]. Rejecting that argument, his Honour observed as follows:

“Had the owners been afforded an opportunity to be heard, they could have exercised that right to ascertain whether the policies and procedures for the collection and analysis of the sample taken from the horse had been complied with and, also, endeavoured to ascertain whether any analysis was affected by, for example, contamination of the sample.” [33].

In circumstances where the applicants plainly had a direct interest in the findings made, and their participation may have made a meaningful difference [34], [37], his Honour found that it was an implied term of the contract that the stewards were obliged to observe the principles of natural justice by providing notice of their hearing to the applicants and an opportunity to be heard prior to making the relevant findings. Since that had not occurred the hearing was procedurally flawed. [38].

Disposition

It was ordered that the disqualification was void and of no effect.

CONTRACTS – GUARANTEES AND INDEMNITIES – WHERE REPAYMENT OBLIGATIONS UNDER A LOAN WERE THE SUBJECT OF A GUARANTEE AND INDEMNITY – WHETHER THE GUARANTEE AND INDEMNITY BOUND THE DEFENDANTS

Vannin Capital Operations Ltd v QNI Resources Pty Ltd [\[2023\] QSC 1](#) ☆

This case concerns a loan agreement that financed the purchase of an aircraft. The agreement was entered into by Queensland Nickel Pty Ltd (now in liquidation), the general manager of a joint venture. The plaintiff (the assignee of rights under the loan agreement) sought payment of amounts outstanding from other companies in the joint venture – QNI Resources and QNI Metals. The plaintiff was successful on the basis that Queensland Nickel had entered into the agreement as agent for QNI Resources and QNI Metals.

1 February 2023

Background

The plaintiff, Vannin, is the assignee of rights under a loan and security for that loan. [6]. The loan was made in 2012 to the third defendant, Palmer Aviation, to finance the purchase of a Bombardier Global Express aircraft. [1]. The transaction documents included a guarantee and indemnity entered into by Queensland Nickel. [13]. In 2016 both Palmer Aviation and Queensland Nickel were placed into voluntary administration (an event of default under the loan). [4]. The aircraft was eventually sold by the liquidators in 2018. [4].

In these proceedings the plaintiff claimed recovery of amounts it alleged were outstanding under the loan for principal and interest. [7]. The first and second defendants (QNI Resources and QNI Metals), against whom recovery was sought, were participants in the nickel refinery joint venture of which Queensland Nickel was the general manager. [2]. Notably, the defendants disputed that they were bound by the guarantee and indemnity on its proper construction. The defendants also counterclaimed for an alleged breach of a duty to obtain the best price for the sale of the aircraft.

In the result, the plaintiff was wholly successful on its claim that the defendants were liable for the outstanding loan debt. The counterclaim was dismissed. [140].

Why the defendants were liable under the guarantee and indemnity

The guarantee and indemnity was executed by Queensland Nickel on terms set out in a schedule to the agreement. [13]. Neither QNI Resources nor QNI Metals was named as a party. [43]. However, Vannin's primary case was that, on the proper construction of the agreement, Queensland Nickel entered into the guarantee and indemnity (which forms part of the agreement) as agent for and on behalf of Resources and Metals, and for that reason those companies are jointly and severally liable for the debt. [43].

In response, the defendants noted that cl 8.1(x) of the agreement said that the parties to it (including Queensland Nickel) did "not enter into any Transaction Document ... as trustee, agent or nominee for any person except in the case of the Guarantor, as set out in cl 1.4(c)". [20]. Notably, the agreement as executed did not contain a cl 1.4(c). [81].

Despite the above provision (and absence of a cl 1.4(c)), Burns J accepted that the guarantee and indemnity was provided by Queensland Nickel in its own capacity and as agent for Resources and Metals. [72]. In reaching this conclusion, his Honour emphasised several aspects of the agreement, including that each of the companies was defined as an "obligor" under the transaction documents (which included the guarantee and indemnity). [78]. Furthermore, cl 1.4 contained an acknowledgment by the parties that any "act or other matter or thing given or done by the Guarantor in connection with the Transaction Documents" could be regarded as having "been given or done on behalf of and with the full authority and consent of the Joint Venturers" (which included Resources and Metals). [79].

Perhaps most importantly, the transaction documents also included a Joint Venturer Letter, which disclosed that Queensland Nickel entered into the transaction documents as agent for Resources and Metals (in cl 1(c)). [81]–[82]. The transaction documents, including that letter, had to be "read and construed together" – and when they were, it was clear that the guarantee and indemnity bound Resources and Metals. [83].

Justice Burns said that, if he were wrong in this construction, "a clear case emerges on the evidence for rectification of the facility agreement". [88]. His Honour found that the reference to "clause 1.4(c)" as an exception in cl 8.1(x) (extracted above) was an obvious mistake, and that it should have been a reference to cl 1(c) in the Joint Venturer Letter, disclosing the agency relationship. [82]. The documents as executed did not "accord with the actual common intention of the parties". [91]. Furthermore, his Honour also said that, if he were wrong in his construction, Resources and Metals ought to be "estopped from denying that [Queensland Nickel] was authorised to enter into the guarantee and indemnity as their agent". [85].

Why the counterclaim was dismissed

The defendants counterclaimed, alleging a set off was available for an alleged failure by the initial lender (before assignment of the rights to the plaintiff) to sell the aircraft at the best price obtainable. [107]. The defendants alleged that Mr Palmer, or his company Mineralogy, were "ready, willing, and able" to pay up to USD$20,000,000 for the aircraft – an amount substantially larger than that ultimately obtained for the sale – but that the lender had failed to pursue this. [107].

Justice Burns found that the counterclaim involved "several misconceptions". [108]. Most significantly, Burns J found that the lender "did not sell the aircraft". [115]. Instead, it was sold by liquidators in accordance with powers vested in them by the Corporations Act 2001 (Cth). [115]. In those circumstances, "no duty of the kind alleged can be said to have been owed by the lender to the defendants". [115].

In any event, Burns J was not satisfied that the "best price obtainable" was the supposed offer of "up to" USD$20,000,000 from Mineralogy or Mr Palmer, which was only offered on the basis that there would be "commercial negotiations", a "complete release", and payment conditional on Mineralogy's success in proceedings in Western Australia. [129], [135]. It would be "rank speculation ... to conclude that a sum much greater than the price actually obtained on sale would have been achieved". [135].

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW – GROUNDS OF REVIEW – JURISDICTIONAL MATTERS – WHETHER DEFICIENCY OF REASONS APPARENT IN AN ADJUDICATION DECISION – WHETHER ADJUDICATOR HAD PROPERLY DISCHARGED HIS TASK UNDER S 88 BUILDING INDUSTRY FAIRNESS (SECURITY OF PAYMENT) ACT 2017 – WHETHER ADJUDICATOR'S DECISION VOID

The State of Queensland v Black Cat Civil Pty Ltd* [2023] QSC 5 ☆

The applicant challenged an adjudicator's decision under the Building Industry Fairness (Security of Payment) Act 2017, on the ground that the decision was void for jurisdictional error. His Honour held that, whilst some aspects of the decision were wanting, any errors were made within jurisdiction. Every ground of challenge to the decision failed.

Bradley J

7 February 2023

The applicant as principal and the first and second respondents (jointly as the contractor) were parties to a contract for construction work, namely upgrading a section of highway. [2]. The contractor made a claim for additional costs and an extension of time due to a latent condition under the contract. [3], [4]. The amount of the claim was disputed by the applicant. [5]. The matter was referred to an adjudicator [6] and the adjudicator found in favour of the contractor. [8].

The applicant sought to argue that the adjudicator failed to consider relevant evidence; failed to carry out an “active process of intellectual engagement” with the issues and failed to give adequate reasons and that as a result, the decision was void for jurisdictional error. [13]–[20].

Was the decision affected by jurisdictional error and therefore void?

The applicant was critical of various aspects of the decision which was made. Firstly, it claimed that the adjudicator did not properly explain his conclusion about the presence of a latent condition in the contract, rendering that conclusion arbitrary. [27]. His Honour did not agree. In his view, the available evidence had been capable of supporting the conclusion reached; the adjudicator had adequately explained how the evidence led to his conclusion; and he had simply preferred one opinion over another, which was “a logical basis (for rejecting the applicant’s argument) and the adjudicator’s intellectual justification for the conclusion.” [39]. He accepted that the adjudicator had assessed the evidence and provided reasons in the manner required by the legislation and there was no jurisdictional error arising from this part of the decision. [41].

The applicant also sought to argue that the adjudicator had possibly misunderstood the onus of proof. [42]. Whilst his Honour agreed that in one respect the adjudicator’s written prose may have been inapt, that was not indicative of jurisdictional error. [46], [47].

Next, the applicant challenged the part of the decision concerning whether the contractor’s notice of delay satisfied the relevant contractual provision. [48]. The Applicant submitted that the decision reached in this regard was not the result of an active process of intellectual engagement with what the notice clause in the contract required; was unsupported by any reasoning; and made no sense. [54]. Albeit accepting that the adjudicator may have been wrong in his conclusion as to whether the contractor’s notice satisfied the extension of claim clause, his Honour found that it was not the case that he did not intellectually engage with the clause and the parties’ submissions. In the event the adjudicator had made an error at all, it was one made within jurisdiction. [56]–[57].

Finally, his Honour did not share the view that the adjudicator’s finding that the contractor was entitled to be paid delay costs, whilst erroneous, made the decision void. That was because again, he had intellectually engaged with the applicant’s submissions, [72], and the relevant finding had been made within the scope of his jurisdiction. [73].

Disposition

The application was dismissed with costs.

QUEENSLAND JUDGMENTS WEBSITE

The Queensland Judgments website, available at www.queenslandjudgments.com.au, was first launched in March 2018. Its object is to publish, on behalf of the principal courts and tribunals of Queensland, an authoritative, complete and functional collection of Queensland case law (including the Queensland Reports) available online to the community and free of charge.

On 4 September 2020, a new version of the Queensland Judgments website was launched, which expanded its coverage to all Queensland Courts and Tribunals. This content will be continuously updated upon the delivery of each judgment or decision authorised for publication from all Queensland Courts and Tribunals.

On 1 March 2021, an additional 35,000 historical unreported judgments were added, including the complete collection of unreported judgments of the Court of Appeal as well as further instalments of the backset of unreported judgments of: the Supreme Court (now complete from 1979); the District Court (now complete from 2000); the Land Court and Land Appeal Court (now complete from 1985); the Planning & Environment Court (now complete from 2000); the Industrial Court (now complete from 2008); and the entire digital collections of the Childrens Court; the Magistrates Court; the Queensland Civil and Administrative Tribunal; the Legal Practice Tribunal; the Queensland Health Practitioners Tribunal; and the Retail Shop Leases Tribunal.
